Notes

Gede (pronounced Geh-day) is one of Haiti's most vibrant celebrations. It happens every year at the start of November — the same time as All Saints' Day and All Souls' Day — when families across Haiti and the Caribbean honor those who have passed away. It typically last the entire month.

But instead of being sad, Gede is full of music, color, laughter, and love. People visit cemeteries, light candles, wear purple, black, and white, and sometimes cook their loved ones' favorite dishes.

The Gede spirits, led by Baron Samdi and Maman Brigitte, remind everyone that life and death are both part of the same circle — and that joy continues through memory, dance, and storytelling.
